

3 neighbors want time

Stadium suit filed

Three couples living on the north side of Cougar Stadium have filed a suit aimed at halting the expansion of the stadium and revoking BYU's conditional-use permit.

Filing the appeal suit were Mr. and Mrs. Kilmer R. Dixon, 310 E. 1900 North; and Mr. and Mrs. William C. Sampson, 300 E. 1900 North.

Dixon said the suit was filed to allow more time to work out compensation with BYU over the effects of the proposed expansion. He said the holidays had made it impossible to meet with officials from the school, and he is hopeful the suit will extend a 30-day deadline to do so.

Eugene Bramhall, an attorney for BYU, is still looking over the complaint and had no comment now.

Dixon said the group was trying to work things out with BYU without involving an attorney. He said the suit was filed to get compensation for expected property devaluation resulting from the expanded stadium.

As the process of enabling resolutions continued to flow smoothly through both houses of the Utah Legislature on Thursday, minor flare-ups occurred in both houses about the values and time factors involved in the process.

Wednesday the process of lifting out non-budgetary items came under attack by Rep. Sam Taylor, D-Salt Lake, who viewed the time as "wasted."

"We've already wasted a lot of time on these resolutions for non-budgetary items," charged Taylor. "We've spent two and a half days just discussing how whether we should or should not have discussions on these bills."

More than 100 bills were pre-filed by lawmakers before the Utah Legislature's 44th Budgetary Session began. Those that are not of a budgetary nature must pass an enabling resolution by both houses to be able to be brought up for debate.

Must receive Under the system, bills and resolutions must receive a two-thirds majority vote by either the House or Senate before they can be considered in this session.

After passing one body of the Legislature, it travels to the other. If both enabling resolution pass, the bill goes back to the floor of its origin for debate and vote.

Every bill "The problem is you end up debating every bill twice," said Rep. Lee W. Farnsworth, R-Provo. "Any bill that is non-budgetary should have one vote. The idea was to save time, but it's a constitutional problem we can't resolve on our own."

"It's very obvious to me that we are far more interested in how many bills are going to pass this session than how good they are or how bad," Sen. E. Veri Asay, R-Salt Lake, said.

Didn't question Asay said he didn't question that a record will be set for the budget session but "I guess it doesn't matter if the budget is higher than it's ever been."

In a Thursday interview, Gov. Scott Matheson expressed concern over the Legislature's actions. "It is not appropriate that they are spending

Holland encourages political participation

BYU President Jeffrey R. Holland has sent university faculty, staff and administrative personnel a letter concerning political activity within the BYU community.

In the letter Holland said, "We encourage all within the BYU community to seek and enjoy appropriate participation in the political process."

However, Holland said in the letter, the university remains neutral with regard to partisan political activity. This is because of the university's relationship to and sponsorship by the LDS Church.

To insure that private opinions and actions of faculty, staff or administrative personnel are not interpreted as those of BYU, I call your attention to several items drawn from university policy on this subject:

1. Personal expressions of political support should not list or imply BYU affiliation.
2. Personal political opinions or expressions of support for candidates may never be transmitted on BYU stationery.
3. BYU classes and other institutional gatherings may not be used to advocate support for specific candidates, parties, or political programs unless authorized by the president."

Holland said there are more detailed policies concerning members of the university who wish to run for public office. These policies are outlined in the University Handbook.

The House, meanwhile, refused to consider a companion bill that would give cities and counties authority to levy and additional .25 percent mineral severance tax.

Income-tax aid to be given free in 333 ELWC

By GLORIA PEREZ
Staff Writer

This year many students could find themselves making out their own income-tax forms with the help of BYU's Money Management Office and its staff.

The office is also preparing for a series of lectures and activities during Consumer Week later this month.

L.R. Parrish, director of the Money Management Office, said the office, in 333 ELWC, will begin Tuesday to help students with tax forms. Should students run into difficult problems the office will refer them to the accounting department, which will also be working on the forms beginning in February.

Monday the office will post the hours students can go for help. During those hours a representative from the office will answer questions and show students how to make out forms.

"We'll be providing some helpful hints, but we're not here to do it for them—just give them assistance," Parrish said.

The office will host Consumer Week, Jan. 25-28, in the ELWC Garden Patio. A series of lectures will be offered to help students manage their money.

"We've invited some local businessmen to come and set up booths for consumer tips," Parrish said. During the week students will be able to learn techniques that will help them become better informed shoppers," he said.

Also, there will be lectures about topics such as how needs insurance and what kind to get, and getting the most out of banking and credit.

The guest speakers for the lectures:

- Dick Nie Nien will speak Monday on how to fill out income-tax forms.
- Robert DeMotte will speak Tuesday on how to avoid excessive cost for car repairs.
- Gene Parrish will speak Wednesday on housing, including finances.
- Dan Morris, of the Utah Office of Consumer Affairs, will speak Thursday on rules and laws to help the consumer.

Women cagers look for revenge against Utah foes

Out to avenge an 89-88 overtime loss in Salt Lake City last season, the Cougar women's basketball team will face the U of U women's team today in the Marriott Center.

The women's game will be played at 4:50 p.m., preceding the men's game.

Students who do not have tickets to the men's game may obtain free admission by leaving some form of identification at the Marriott Center ticket office before the women's game and picking it up afterwards.

Leading the Intermountain Athletic Conference with a 2-1 record, the Cougars are averaging 86.4 points per game.

All-American Jackie Beene McBride is leading the team in scoring with an 21-point average. Lori Vreeken and Jeannette Weston follow.

McBride with averages of 15.8 and 13.2 points respectively.

The Ute women's team is 2-2 in conference play and 9-9 overall.

finishing last year with a 25-5 record, the best in the school's history, the Utes shared a position in the 1980-81 WAC standings with roming.

However, this year's Utah team is a different in last year's conference-championship team. One from the Utes' 1980-81 squad are the families of All-American Danny Vranes and Tom Vranes, as well as Karl Bankowski and Scotty Vranes.

Vranes was the fifth player and the second senior in the NBA draft, going to the Seattle Superstars, while Chambers was the eighth player picked and now plays for the San Diego Clippers.

Coach Jerry Pimm, in his eighth year as head coach at Utah, has six lettermen returning from a season, along with 6-11, redshirt Craig Bell, a lettered two years ago.

At 6-7, Mannion heads the list of returnees for Utah. A junior, Mannion averaged 6.9 points a game last season.

He is the senior on the team is Craig Hammer, 6-5, averaged 4.9 points last season while averaging 32 percent from the field.

Ker Williams will be the other junior on the team, averaging three points per game last year while playing behind Vranes.

Explosives Angelo Robinson and Chris Wines are playing time last season, and newcomers to the squad are George Fargis, 6-foot-5, Mike Bernas, 6-10, Ray McAdams, 6-8; Tim McLaughlin, 6-9; Steve Van Ness, 6-9; and Mario Williams, 6-6.

They look at who is the biggest as far as returning player experience is concerned, the Cougars.

Fred Roberts, Steve Trumbo, Greg Kite, Greg Liff, John Saarelainen, Gary Furniss, Craig Mattman, Kevin Nielsen and Mike Maxwell will back again for their second, third or fourth year WAC play.

Unfortunately, the Cougars are having serious times putting things together offensively, especially their passing game.

They have a three-year starter and the only 4-team All-American Conference runner-up in the league, has the scoring ability to get the job done, and being looked upon by the Cougars leadership.

But the Cougars need to put together a solid unit in order to defeat the Utes and stay in the running for post-season competition.

BYU fans have to act themselves when the last 4-BYU Utah met in basketball and the game isn't have a direct bearing on WAC leadership?

So would have to go a long time back, but the light's clash in the Marriott Center may determine who will be left on top at the end of the season.

Looking to improve his 1-1 dual-meet record, the U wrestling team will be the host to the Portland State Vikings today and the Boise State Broncos Saturday.

Both matches will start at 2:30 p.m. on the main ring of the Smith Fieldhouse.

Opposing the Cougars are two former BYU wrestlers who grappled under BYU coach Fred Aze — PSU wrestler Lyle Stratton and Boise coach Mike Young.

Aze said his Cats are in better shape after losing in week's dual meets against Oregon State and nationally ranked Nebraska.

He Cougars have been Western Athletic Conference champs 13 of the last 17 years.

Portland State, which defeated BYU last year in 1980, posted a 3-3 record before the end of its road trip.

SU's Stratton will be meeting his old wrestling nemesis, Cougar Nelson Gardner, in the 134-pound.

BYU coach Frank Arnold makes a point with an official during last year's BYU-Utah game in the Marriott Center. The Cats are coming off back-to-back losses to Colorado State and Wyoming.

Last year, the Cougars and the Utes split wins. The Utes won in the Special Event Center, 60-56.

The Cougars followed suit by dumping Utah, 96-76 in All-American Angelo Aime's last collegiate game in the Marriott Center.

Basketball Notes:

Wyoming continues to roll over conference foes — the "Pokes" defeated Air Force 54-30 Wednesday at the Astoria. The Cougars are now 4-0 in the WAC — the Falcons sank to 1-4 overall and 0-3 in the WAC.

There are two important conference matchups tonight. The TEP Miners will be at second-place Hawaii, while San Diego State meets New Mexico at home.

The Rainbow and Aztec will switch opponents Saturday. Hawaii will embark on a grueling end-of-January schedule that finds the Woes at the mainland Jan. 17 through 19.

Hawaii can continue to build an edge by winning at home before heading to the mainland.

San Diego State can climb back into the conference race by knocking off TEP and New Mexico at home.

Wyoming's Bill Garrett leads the WAC in scoring with an 18.1 points per game average and a 50.0 percent shooting, counting on 101 of 161 attempts.

BYU's Fred Roberts is fourth in overall scoring per game with a 16.1 average.

Steve Trumbo is right behind Roberts averaging 14.1 points per game. In non-conference games Colorado State will visit Nevada Las Vegas tonight.

The TVG game of the week will have the CSU Rams at Air Force.

Cat wrestlers grapple with Vikings, Broncos

Looking to improve his 1-1 dual-meet record, the U wrestling team will be the host to the Portland State Vikings today and the Boise State Broncos Saturday.

Both matches will start at 2:30 p.m. on the main ring of the Smith Fieldhouse.

Opposing the Cougars are two former BYU wrestlers who grappled under BYU coach Fred Aze — PSU wrestler Lyle Stratton and Boise coach Mike Young.

Aze said his Cats are in better shape after losing in week's dual meets against Oregon State and nationally ranked Nebraska.

He Cougars have been Western Athletic Conference champs 13 of the last 17 years.

Portland State, which defeated BYU last year in 1980, posted a 3-3 record before the end of its road trip.

SU's Stratton will be meeting his old wrestling nemesis, Cougar Nelson Gardner, in the 134-pound.

Davis, in his eighth year as head wrestling coach at Boise State posted a 0-2 mark before coming into this week's action.

Overall, the Broncos' top performer, Kevin Wood at 177 pounds, has had a successful season, recording an 8-1 record, including medalist honors at the Boise State Open, Beehive Invitational and Rebel Classic.

BYU wrestlers have been competing against each other every practice to build up endurance with at least two seven-minute simulation matches.

The Cougars are prepared for both matches, according to Davis.

"We have more experience, which is a definite advantage... we plan to win," Davis said.

The probable Cougar lineup will be: 115 — Brad Anderson 11 wins and three losses; 126 — Chris Taylor 12-1; 138 — Billy Boyd 5-5-1; 167 — Kerry Hatt 10-4; 177 — Jeff Needs 7-8; 190 — Robert Steele 3-5; and heavyweight — Larry Hamilton 1-1.

Austin AP's 1981

NEW YORK (AP) — Last year at this time, Tracy Austin was unsure whether she would be able to play tennis again at the same level that made her the youngest U.S. Open champion in history when she captured America's premier tennis event in 1979.

But Austin made a complete recovery from sciatica — a pain in the lower back — to win her second U.S. Open title and on to be voted Female Athlete of the Year for 1981 by The Associated Press.

Austin received 99 votes for a four-vote margin over Wimbledon champion Chris Evert Lloyd, the top female athlete in 1980, in balloting sports writers and sportscasters throughout the nation.

"It was certainly a different year and a tough year," said the 19-year-old from Rolling Hills, Calif.

Austin was informed of her victory the night she lost in the Avon Championships of Washington. "It came at a great time," she said when informed she had won. "It uplifted me."

David Morgan as Pippin finds temptation hard to resist in BYU's upcoming production of "Pippin." Charles Whitman will direct the musical, to be performed Thursday through Jan. 23 and Jan. 26-30.

Broadway show 'Pippin' to mix theater, theology

By JULIE POTTER
Senior Reporter

"Pippin," an unusual Broadway musical of daring theatrical and theological implications, will be presented Thursday through Jan. 23 and Jan. 26-30 at 8 p.m. in the de Jong Concert Hall.

Charles Whitman, director of the production, said "Pippin" is the musical story of a young man trying to find fulfillment in life. The man discovers he is unable to find any happiness until he is forced to evaluate what is really important.

Lighthearted

"On the surface, it's a very simple, lighthearted story, but underneath it all there are tremendous theological implications," said Whitman.

Whitman said he saw the production in 1976. It had played for four years in New York City to packed and enthusiastic audiences. "I was touched emotionally by the philosophical moments and held by the music and lyrics much more deeply than I was by the razzamatazz spectacle," he said.

"Beneath the smut and suggestive choreography was a tender allegory about a youth's search for his identity," Whitman said.

The BYU production of the musical will feature a slightly different focus from the original piece, he said.

"Sometimes I think we at BYU have been guilty of changing a production to the detriment of the piece. But this is just a slightly different interpretation, a family-oriented production that has a spiritual focus," Whitman said.

Daring theatrics

"Pippin" received enthusiastic reviews for the daring theatrics it used, Whitman said. The book music and lyrics were praised.

Whitman said the choreography is "breathtaking." "We've been leaving the door open during rehearsals, and we have an audience every night."

The scenic design for "Pippin" was done by Eric Fiedling with costume design by Janet Svensen and lighting by R. Murray Fagan. Craig B. Call is the choreographer for the production.

The musical director is David Mackinnon with technical direction by Paul Nibley.

Matinee performances are scheduled Jan. 26 and 30. Tickets may be purchased at the drama ticket office.

Y production to compete in festival

A recent BYU production of Arthur Kopit's "Wings" has been selected as an entry in the Region VII competition of "Festivent 82," this year's American College Theater Festival.

The production, directed by Ivan Crowland, will compete Jan. 27-30 on the University of Utah campus with plays from the University of Alaska, the University of Montana and the University of Utah.

Winning plays from competitions across the country will compete later this year at the Washington, D.C., Kennedy Center for the national finals.

"Wings" portrays the frustration and confusion of a stroke victim trying to deal with the reality of his handicap. Four BYU theater students, Jeff Combe, a senior from Provo, Rick Macy, a graduate student from Lake Oswego, Ore., David Spencer, a senior from Nephi, Utah, and Scott Wilkinson, a graduate student from Oxnard, Calif., are among 27 regional actors who will compete.

Film maker to visit Y

Film maker Bill Mason, winner of more than 40 awards for his nature-related films, will be at BYU on Monday for the Provo premiere of his film "The Death of a Legend."

Terry Petrie, publicity assistant for the department of theater and cinematic arts, said the film examines many of the myths and fallacies surrounding the wolf.

The film will be shown free at 12:30 p.m. in the Varsity Theater. Following the screening, Mason will discuss the film and its creation.

"Mason is an excellence in film makers, which nowadays is rare," said Tad Z. Danielewski, a professor of theater.

Mason is in Utah for a "Bill Mason Film Festival," which is sponsored by the Utah Museum of Natural History at the University of Utah, Petrie said.

The festival runs through March 29, and features many of Mason's award-winning films, including "Song of the Paddle," "Face of the Earth," "Rise and Fall of the Great Lakes," and his Academy Award nominee, "Paddle to the Sea."

According to Petrie, Mason has won two British Oscars and two Academy Award nominations for his works. His visit to Provo is sponsored by the department of theater and cinematic arts.

I HAD CANCER AND I LIVED.

Gene Littler

It's possible to go into an annual checkup feeling terrific. And come out knowing something's wrong. It happened to me. The doctor found what I couldn't even feel... a little lump under my arm. If I had put off the appointment for one reason or another, I probably wouldn't be here today. Because that little lump I couldn't feel was a melanoma, a highly aggressive form of cancer that spreads very quickly. It's curable—but only if found in time.

So when I tell you, "Get a checkup," you know it's from my heart. It can save your life. I know. It saved mine.

Have a regular checkup.
It can save your life.

Brain 'examined' in Thursday talk

Breakthroughs in research on man's ability to interpret codes and impulses from the brain to the eyes were among the topics discussed at "The Flea Market of Ideas" Thursday.

Dr. Harold L. Miller, a professor of psychology, discusses brain impulses with students. Miller and Dr. Donovan E. Fleming, chairman of the psychology department, spoke about brain-impulse research in a Thursday "Flea Market of Ideas" speech.

BYU has received a $1,700 grant from Eastman Kodak Co. of Rochester, N.Y., said Paul Schneider, associate director of communications for the R&D Development Office.

According to Joann Roberts, scholarship director in the Financial Aid Office, the company has given money to the university for the past two years.

"When a BYU graduate goes to work for the company within five years of his graduation and remains there for five years, the company awards money to a student now studying the employee's major," she said.

This year the money will go to a chemistry student or students. Last year it was awarded to two manufacturing technology students, and the year before it went to a mechanical engineering student.

"Since the money was not solicited for any specific need other than the scholarship, the chemistry department will decide how it will be used," said Schneider.

BRIGHAM YOUNG UNIVERSITY A Discouraging Word

"Cells of one hemisphere are tied to both sides of the brain," Fleming said.

Brain processes are related to mental events, according to research done by Dr. Roger W. Sperry, Miller said.

Pathways "Sperry wanted to know if pathways in the brain were under genetic mechanisms," Miller said.

Most of Sperry's research dealt with epilepsy patients whose disease was life-threatening, Miller said.

Sperry discovered that both hemispheres of the brain are highly specialized.

"Each hemisphere functions by itself," said Miller. "Both sides of the brain have their own private chains of memory."

All sections of "Beef Cattle Production" are filled and the closest class available is "Principles of Child Guidance" (Not exactly the kind of critter you had in mind).

ROTC Cadet Glen Riddle, above, a senior majoring in mechanical engineering from Barstow, Calif., and another ROTC cadet, below, experience the trials and errors of cross country skiing while performing tactical maneuvers in Rock Canyon.

Skiing highlights ROTC snow drills

Army ROTC cadets began their winter tactical maneuvers by learning the basics of skiing and snowshoeing Thursday in Rock Canyon.

It has been two years since Army ROTC has been cross country skiing and snowshoeing because weather conditions have not permitted it, said Helen Hayes, secretary for the department of military science. "The exercises are planned each year, and we pray for snow," she said.

"I want to be doing it, but I am sick," said Cadet Liza Owen, a freshman from El Centro, Calif., with an undeclared major. "There is an esprit de corps here. You get to know people, and we help each other out. Most of the time women are treated as equals. If you need help, others help you without looking down on you," Owen said.

This week's platoon leader, Cadet Michael Townsend, a senior from Los Gatos, Calif., majoring in history, said the experience was different and exciting.

"I like the training. If we have to fight in the snow we have had some training," he said. The one-mile course is difficult the first time, said Capt. Ray Nielsen.

"I love physical training. It was a little difficult for me, but I like snowshoeing," she said.
